REWILDING & GIVING BACK PILLARS

Through a carefully selection of initiatives and partnerships we are supporting different projects in Chile making travel a force of good and sharing this mission with our travelers under the philosophy of "hands on" to support communities, territories and the unique biological heritage of Chile.

HOW DOES IT WORK?

We have partnership agreements with different local organizations that are working restlessly for conservation and sustainable economical development of local communities. Our travelers join the actions in the field based on the annual schedules of these organizations, avoiding any disruption to their operations and guaranteeing that any activity in the field will be genuine and necessary, avoiding "shows" for our travelers.

Travelers dedicate a portion of the trip (usually between 3 to 6 hours) to visit the projects and work in the field with our team. Trips that include these activities are labelled as "giving back & rewilding" and incorporate in the cost a fee that goes directly to our partner organizations.
